POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Wee. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ramparts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverville. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverville, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

THE NEXT PRESIDENT

THE QUESTION of the successor to the present incumbent of the presidency, which has engrossed the attention of Republicans and Democrats alike, has been thrust more prominently into the limelight of public discussion by the pronouncement of Edward M. House that President Roosevelt does not seek a third election but after the expiration of his present term, will retire to private life and devote himself to writing.

There is no question but what House spoke by the card. No more careful man in his public utterances than he. "I am a friend of the President's," he replied Delphically and with finality when the interviewer to whom this pronouncement was confided questioned, somewhat indirectly, that the President might not agree with this conclusion.

Notwithstanding the high source from which this declaration came the country at large is inclined to take this statement with a considerable amount of reserve. At the same time there is no question but what the sage of Manchester—in the good old summer time—had ample authority for his outgiving. It certainly bore the ex-cathedra hall-mark. Perchance a ballon d'essai.

But along comes Governor Earle who, too, is a pretty close friend of the President, and states that he is unreservedly in favor of a third term for Roosevelt. And all who know the New Yorker, with his utter contempt for precedent or the Supreme Court, believe that with his admitted vaulting ambition nothing could be nearer his deepest ambition than to go down in history as the president whose services to the country were considered so supremely important—yes, as its very saviour—than to have this come to pass. Then indeed would he be vindicated in his day and generation.

But for the moment let us pass to a review of the Republican chance—if indeed they have any chance. Of all the debacles in American political history none has been so dramatic as the sudden hurling from power and its absolute disintegration in the nation than the collapse of the once puissant Republican party, with the tradition of Abraham Lincoln as its cornerstone as the bearer of the Ark of the Covenant of American liberties. All down the line, even in Massachusetts, its abject surrender to the enemy after three-quarters of a century of intrenched power is indeed pitiable.

What chance have the Republicans? We have only to look at the last presidential election to find the answer. First and finally the Republicans must clean and fumigate its house of the old guard which has brought death and destruction in its path—the Ogden Mills - Mellon oligarchy, "greatest since Hamilton"—who, with a succession of puppet presidents from Harding down to and including Hoover, put the party on the rocks. In their selfish ambition and determination they gave the word to the press of the country to oppose the only man with whom they would have a fighting chance, Borah, a known friend of economic reforms, a man they could not handle nor who would not tolerate them around the White House and, after a visit to Kansas, Mills and company pronounced Landon "all right"—his political death blow. With practically all the press of the country, metropolitan and farm journals boosting him, Landon, who made a pitiable showing on the radio, couldn't carry his own state. Borah on whom the Praetorian guard trained its guns was the only Republican who came out victorious in his own state with a larger majority than ever. Would the whole northwestern farmer belt have voted the same way were Borah the candidate and would the Republicans have had a stronger representation in Congress? That is debatable. But if one question was decided it was that the Mellon-Mills-Hoover crowd has been sunk ten thousand fathoms deep in the morass of American politics. No impartial student of affairs can evade this conclusion.

Then to whom are the Republicans to turn for salvation? To younger men in trend with the times. Looming up on the horizon is young Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts whose courageous campaign, which led to the defeat of the all powerful Curley in the senatorial campaign, elevated to a high spot in the eyes of the nation. From his start in politics in the Massachusetts legislature he has taken advanced ground on labor and other economic questions; he is in the foremost files on these important matters. A chip off the old block, but he needs seasoning and training. He is in reserve. Then will it be Vandenberg, and this seems to exhaust the list of Republican possibilities except, break it gently to the old guard, La Follette who, as a Republican candidate would sweep the northern country. The objection trumped up against Borah that he is too old would not hold in his case. And La Follette might possibly break into the solid south, which is audibly revolting against the bizarre and unwelcome fellowship with Tammany—as it characterizes the Roosevelt-Farley alliance. Stranger things have happened—"politics make strange bedfellows"—and the stone that the Mills-Mellon mechanics rejected, despite Hamilton Fish, may become the cornerstone of the house. Fantastic? Yes, and so was Abraham Lincoln's unexpected election to the presidency, an unknown, sod-house lawyer unsuccessful in politics up to his elevation in a quadrilateral contest to the seat of the mighty.

Well, coming back to Roosevelt and his chances. Politicians are convinced that he—who his friends acclaim the smartest politician who ever sat in the White House—will be in the ring for the nomination—perhaps as a compromise candidate, although Byrd of Virginia appears to be the choice of the old-time Conservative Democracy.

For it is undeniable that the parting of the ways has come to Roosevelt within his own party. The report of the Judiciary of the Senate against his Supreme Court "packing" bill composed almost entirely of Democrats and against every influence Roosevelt and Farley could muster leaves no doubt that this rift is irreconcilable.

Roosevelt realizes this fully. And does this realization account for his passage of the Rubicon into the extreme Left bank of the Lewis legions in the hazard of new political fortunes? Time will tell.

KARMA

By John Masefield

I hold that when a person dies
His soul returns again to earth
Arrayed in some new flesh disguise—
Another mother gives him birth
With sturdier limbs and brighter brain
The old soul takes the road again.

Such is my own belief and trust—
This hand—this hand that holds the pen
Has many a hundred times been dust
And turned as dust to dust again
These eyes of mine have blinked and shone
In Thebes, in Troy, in Babylon.
All that I rightly think or do
Or make, or spoil, or blast, or curse, or bless,
Is curse or blessing justly due
For sloth or effort in the past.
My Life's a statement of the sum of vice indulged or overcome.

And as I wander on the road
I shall be helped and healed and blest —
Dear words shall cheer and be as goads
To urge to heights before unguessed.
My road shall be the road I made
All that I gave shall be repaid.

So shall I fight; so shall I tread
In this long war beneath the stars,
So shall I faint and show the scars
Until this case, this clogging mold
Be smithied all to kingly gold.

Art and Dramatic:

AT STRAND THEATRE

JIM FISK'S ROMANCE
DRAMATIZED IN "THE"
TOAST OF NEW YORK

Bringing to the screen the romance based upon the career of Jim Fisk, one of the most colorful and spectacular financiers and high rollers of the period immediately following the Civil War, "The Toast of New York" presents Edward Arnold, Cary Grant, Frances Farmer, Jack Oakie and a huge cast in a glittering panorama of American drama.

Fisk, beginning as a small-town peddler in the photoplay, quickly becomes one of the most powerful money barons of Wall Street. Amassing a fortune from the manipulation of the stock of the Erie Railroad, he lavishes a king's ransom on Josie Mansfield, an unknown beauty whom he sponsors and makes a Broadway star, only to lose her amid the wreck of his many ambitions. The picture has been produced upon an elaborate scale.

Forbidden by the courts to conduct the business of the Erie in New York, the resourceful Fisk moves the headquarters of the company to Jersey City, and when it seems that Commodore Vanderbilt will gain control of the road, Fisk works the printing presses overtime to issue more securities. Colorful and flamboyant, his name is repeatedly on the front pages of the daily newspapers and his lavish spending is the eighth wonder of the period. His end is equally as sensational as his rise.

Fresh from her laurels in "Come and Get It," in which she played opposite Arnold, Frances Farmer has the Josie Mansfield role. Cary Grant, zooming to new star honors, is cast as Jim Fisk's pal "Dandy" Boyd, who finally wins Josie from him. Jack Oakie, as another crony of the meteoric financier, has a side-splitting comedy role. Rare humor, as well as spectacular drama, pervades the action.

Donald Meek plays the highly important Daniel Drew, favorite foe of Fisk. Clarence Kolb, of the noted stage team, Kolb and Dill, is cast as Commodore Vanderbilt, and others in the exceptionally large cast include Paul Guilfoyle, Douglas Woods and George Irving. Rowland V. Lee directed "The Toast of New York," produced by Edward Small for RKO Radio.

Note: One of the sights of my youthful New York days was a visit to the Broadway Central and its grand staircase — scene of the shooting. Building now demolished. — Ed.

ARTISTRY AT THE ROCKPORT
ART GALLERY

The seventeenth annual exhibition of painting, sculpture and prints in the galleries of The Old Tavern, Rockport, proved to be unusually fine. Delicate subjects were appreciatively portrayed on canvas and the etchings gripped the spectators imagination. Among the sculptured work, one felt the thought that the creator placed in his work. The arrangement of all paints, etchings and sculpture was very correct.

A few of the outstanding paintings there, one was sure to notice "Day Dreams" by Jane Freeman. The genre feeling of this portrait gave one a sense of dreaming.

Jeanette B. Irving's "Vermont Snow Scene" caught all the lights that decorate a lake with trees and snow covered ground. Her application of pigments gave one the sensation of being near to nature and seeing through her eyes what she had placed before us.

"Loblolly Point" by Galen J. Perrett was broad in his treatment and virile in his choice. His coloring was natural and one who knows the seas would appreciate the understanding with which this was done.

Another picture which caught the imagination was "Distant Range" by Aldro T. Hibbard. The nuances of shading and his application of pigments places him in the Realist class.

The painting "The Wreck" by Stanley Woodward was a typical picture by this artist. There was a vigor felt and expressed and the knowledge of his subject was truly sincere.

Among the sculpture, one work of art that greatly interests one was called "Ideal Head" by Richard Recchia. It completely fits its title and was remarkably well done.

"Frederick The Baker" by Alaine Davis was quite dynamic and quite a distinctive figure head adds to the beauty of the exhibit.

A clever etching was "Tom Daly, Poet" by Nicola D'Ascenzo. The drawing was done in brown and white and was a most complete likeness of the model.

Marguerite Peaslee's etching "Apple Tree Cottage" was very ably done and one of the outstanding in its class.

The donated pictures which are to be drawn off soon (the proceeds from these donations will go to the Art Association) are by Stanley Woodward, Maurice Compris, Antonio Cirino, Reynolds Beal and Blanche Coleman.

Many more and equally as interesting paintings were on exhibition and spectators were delighted with the display.

"KING MACKEREL"

MR. "SCOMBER SCOMBRUS" "THE GAY MACKEROL," WHO HAS RECENTLY GONE A.W.O.L. FROM THESE SHORES. REGARDED AS ONE OF THE MOST SHAPELY FISH OF THE SEAS. HE HAS SERVED AS A MODEL FOR SPEEDY SAILING CRAFT.

"Twinkle doodle dum
Twinkle doodle dum
That was the Highly interesting song he sung,
Twinkle doodle dum, twinkle doodle dum
The Bold Fisherman
and the Gay mack-er-ol."

"But when he arrived off Pimlico
His little boat did wobble wobble so Until overboard he fell."

So goes the old English doggerel anent the bold mackerel fisherman as it comes down in Mother Goose, which goes to show the mackerel was in high regard many years ago.

Now it is interesting to note — anent the above little ditty — that the first record we have of the long list of Gloucester fishermen drowned is recorded in a log of one of the ships that brought over the original colonists. For when the Master had brought his ship off Gloucester in 1632 a large school of mackerel were seen sporting on the surface. This so excited one of the passengers that he immediately got out a hook and line — no doubt hoping to catch a fresh fish dinner after the salt fodder of the voyage — and began to draid for the fish. It must have been quite a rough day for it is recorded in the log of the voyage that while so engaged he fell overboard and before he could be rescued drowned just within a biscuit's toss of the promised land he had braved nearly 3000 miles' voyage to make a hazard of new fortunes. And so the little ditty was thus verified seriously in the annals of the New England as Capt. John Smith calls it.

All things pertaining to the fisheries have a peculiar fascination to the visitors from the western country who have read tales of the daring of the Gloucester men of the seas and of all the branches of marine harvesting that intrigue them most the mackerel seems to hold the center of the stage.

And it is an interesting fact that this port alone of all the communities of the New World absolutely produces and controls this entire branch of the fisheries. There are other places in Nova Scotia where a few of the fishermen catch mackerel in nets but their product is comparatively small; the fact remains that the Gloucester fleet alone monopolizes the catch of this much prized fish in the New World.

The fish were much esteemed by the early colonists. In 1680 the Massachusetts Bay colony passed a law that mackerel should not be caught by nets hauled from the shore. This because of a scarcity of the fish, of which hardly a handful had been caught since the place was settled. But mackerel have a habit of disappearing without known cause and the colonists thought that fishing by using nets caused the scarcity and so legislated accordingly.

Mackerel have always been in high favor. It possesses a distinct and slightly gamey flavor whereas cod and haddock have a rather negative taste. It was in high favor with the colonists and the catch salted in barrels was in demand throughout the colonies and was one of the principal sources of revenue.

The entire catch was shipped salted in barrels holding 200 pounds net of the fish, as one, twos and threes, sorted according to size and fitness. Extra large fish were branded as bloaters. This sorting or "culling" was by order of the colonial government that the consumer might be protected and know just what quality of fish he was getting. To further assure that this quality should be maintained an inspector general of fish was appointed whose deputies saw to it that a rightful "cull" was made and that each barrel-head of the fish was branded by means of a burned-in brand which could not be erased or changed, and if the fish so contained did not come up to government specifications they could be traced to the place of origin and a heavy fine imposed. This method was continued up to 1895 when the office of Inspector-General of Fish in Massachusetts was abolished — in fact a few years later the change in the shipment of the fish, the catch wholly salted being abandoned and the fish marketed fresh as they came from the water, would have abolished that lucrative job — the fees of the Inspector-General being five cents per barrel, the catch in some years approaching 350,000 barrels. One Gloucester "fortune" was so derived.

Up to about 1870 the fish were caught with hook and line, the practise being to throw over bait, crushed fish "chum" to toll the fish to the surface. The fishermen on the starboard side of the vessel would manipulate some half dozen lines at the same time when the mackerel responded to the throwing of fine bait which sank slowly. The hook was peculiar, called a "jig," the hook itself being imbedded in a small piece of lead which caused it to sink the line being a slender though tough material.

Each fisherman threw his catch into a barrel as caught. When the rush was over and the fish "sunk" he proceeded to dress his catch, that is to split it down the back remove the entrails and then pack it in barrels with a liberal quantity of salt. When completed each man carved a private mark in the wooden head of the barrel which was stowed below and when the voyage was completed the vessel returned to the home port, the mackerel were landed on the wharf, culled according to their size and quality, repacked and shipped, each man remunerated according to whether he was "high line" or farther down the scale. Hence "high liner," in the local vernacular. The Gloucester catch in those days — just after the Civil war — was some 250,000 barrels and more annually. Some 200 fine clipper fishing schooners were engaged in this fishery from this port and some 200 more along the New England coast from Eastport extending to the Cape Cod section, altogether a fleet of some 400 vessels in New England.

About 1830 the mackerel began to get scarce and deserted the New England shores and the most of the New England outports gave up the fishery in consequence. They never returned to its pursuit and they dropped out of the lists as maritime ports of fish production.

But the Gloucester fishermen were of hardier mold. They resolved to go on voyages of exploration and found that mackerel were to be found in the North bay or Bay Chaleur in the waters of the Bay of St. Lawrence. To this they resorted in large number with success. It is a peculiar fact that the mackerel which frequent this Bay of St. Lawrence seldom "school," or come to the surface as do the mackerel along the New England seaboard so these fish were "tolled" up by throwing bait as was described.

The fleet usually sailed for the "Bay" to arrive there about July remaining until the middle of September. They usually secured two "trips" or cargoes aggregating about 300 barrels of fish. Sometimes these were trans-shipped "home" from the Gulf of Canso and another, and perhaps a third trip secured in the time saved.

When one of the fleet vessels had secured a fare it was the custom to notify the others by hoisting the national ensign at the mainmast head, reminiscent of the homeward bound pennant of the navy or the ships in the foreign trade.

In the Fall when these vessels returned large quantities of these salted mackerel were landed and the skippers and owners were wont to sell them, literally "on the curb," in front of the then Custom house on Front, now Main street. Commission buyers were on hand and I have seen some 50,000 barrels of these fish sold in one lot at one time, in fact have written up an illustrated article at the time of an occurrence of this character. In this way the entire catch of the fleet was brought to and sold from the home port. At present the catch which had amounted to about 200,000 barrels annually for the past ten years has all but a negligible amount been marketed fresh at other ports—thereby throwing a large number of superannuated fishermen "as cullers" and packers out of remunerative employment.

By hazarding new mackerel fortunes in the new field of the North Bay contact was made with the fishermen of the Maritime provinces who shipped on board and became a part, in fact practically the whole of the fishing fleet in consequence, large numbers coming to this port and making their homes. Had it not been for this fact Gloucester might have gone off the map as a fishing port — for the losses at sea in war and the fisheries for the more than two centuries previous had practically exhausted the fine maritime native stock of the place — and thus Gloucester continued the sole fishing port of importance of the country after 1870.

It was the practise in those days to take boys usually sons of the masters or crews, during the summer vacations, on these mackerel voyages and, thus train them in the ways of the sea. The writer at ten was on one of these trips and well remembers the terrific Lord's day gale of the last of August 1873 when fourteen vessels and 165 men — including a number of boy playmates — perished in the awful night when the heavens literally opened and the hurricanes literally blew the man on the deck down. Fortunate were those afloat who survived that awful night. I am one of the last who experienced that catastrophe.

After 1870 came a revolution in the method of catching the fish which has changed the whole aspect of the business. At that time the menhaden or "porgie," a fish which swam in great "schools" on the surface was sought for its oil — used in leather tanning. This fish when on the surface was surrounded by a purse seine and taken at one time in hundreds of barrels.

The idea came to some of the observing fishermen that this method be applied to the mackerel catch on the New England coast. It was tried and with success and almost in one year the mackerel seine displaced the old laborious and catching process. For some ten years up to 1885 the fishermen reaped a harvest catching the fish in quantity at will and throwing away all but the very largest.

From that period — about fifteen years — up to 1885 large catches of the mackerel were caught. A school would be surrounded, bailed on deck, the smaller sized being thrown overboard. Suddenly about 1883 came a sharp drop in the catch; the mackerel had disappeared. It had been noticed that that catch had been dwindling and that the fish were smaller every year until in 1883 came the great "tinker year" — large schools only of year old mackerel being taken and salted, the fish finding a ready sale especially in the west as "nickel mackerel." They ran about 600 to the barrel, the fishermen receiving $2.87 per barrel — the writer was in the fleet then and knows whereof he writes —

EASTERN POINT

The bequests of the late Seth K. Ames for some 35 years a summer resident of this section as published in the press is a notable document inasmuch as it has recognized the high obligation of a successful man of business to faithful employees. Mr. Ames, a native of Maine established a grocery store in Boston. Notwithstanding "chains" were in existence he saw an opportunity to found a sequence of these establishments conducted on a certain basis. The customer could always be assured of obtaining a superior article at moderate price, quality considered. His establishments were meticulously neat although not garish. He selected his managers and employees with care. His chain grew to fifty stores. All prospered. He recognized that in these men he had more than employees. They were partners, without whose loyal cooperation he could not have succeeded.

So recognizing their worth he left substantial sums to those of long time service ranging from $5,000 to $50,000, the latter in the case of the family chauffeur. This speaks well for the thoughtfulness of the man and gives an index to those principles which contributed to the success of his business. Such examples are not numerous but they exemplify the Golden Rule as applied to commercial life. If we are not misinformed he never had a labor trouble.

Guest of Mrs Loose

Mr. Justice McReynolds of the Supreme Court of Washington D. C. is the house guest of Mrs. J. Leander Loose at her seagirt summer home "Searocks" at Eastern Point. Judge McReynolds will remain for a period during August and expressed himself as being glad to get to Eastern Point with its cooling sea breezes. The judge has been a guest at "Searocks" in former seasons and is much impressed with the desirability of Eastern Point as a summer home.

A feature at the Eastern Point Yacht Club last Saturday night was the large clam bake which was held on the rocks outside the clubhouse, tables and chairs having been scattered about. This thoroughly delectable repast was enjoyed by a large gathering, who made merry with songs and laughter.

BASS ROCKS

The most hilarious feat of the season was the burlesque tennis match held at Bass Rocks Golf Club last week by Mr. John Heyl, Mrs. Bertha Barker and Mrs. Tony Brainard. Mr. Heyl, had for days, been watching Mrs. Barker and Mrs. Brainard playing singles and thought they were pretty good — but in his opinion he was just a little better. So came the challenge — he would play against the two of them and was most readily accepted.

Mr. Heyl (to add a little nervousness to the opposition) came to the courts at the appointed hour, gaily costumed, bringing a phonograph with all the latest recordings and tacked up a sign which read, "Handlebar Heyl versus Terrible Tony and Battling Bertha."

In the meantime, the two women had gotten drift of their challenger's doings and decided a little nervousness on the part of Mr. Heyl might aid them. They came equally as comically dressed and brought with them a goodly sized stretcher, ably borne by two carriers, which was placed in Mr. Heyl's court and carried to and fro during the match. Mr. Heyl emerged the victor, winning two out of three sets, but great credit was rendered to the losers for their good sportsmanship.

As hostesses for the bridge-lunch-eon this Tuesday at the Golf Club are Miss Clara Gilbert and Miss A. F. G. Jarvie.

Wednesday evening, Mrs. Victor Kauffmann was hostess at a dinner given by her for Washington guests and friends, the party numbering about forty-five in all. The gathering took place at the Clubhouse.

THE ROCKPORT SHORE

The tragic occurrence of Sunday at Pigeon Cove threw a pall over the community. Apparently the pile of grout which had accumulated in the past forty years was as solidly locked as the pyramids. Hundreds had perhaps traveled over it without incident. Then suddenly and without warning the unexpected happened. Nothing of the kind has ever happened here. It could not have been foreseen and guarded against.

The pothole of the Sunday closing episode has apparently subsided. We doubt whether any substantial injury has been done any artist in consequence or that anyone of the fraternity will be unduly bothered in entertaining their friends and callers any of the seven days in the week. Whether such publicity is desirable, to the better grade of the profession, is a question.

On August 23, the Rotary Club of Gloucester will hold a dinner social at the Rockport Golf Club. Mr. Iver Poole is to be chairman of the affair.

Guests at the Rockport Golf Club during the past week have been: Judge W. E. Collins, Boston; Judge F. W. Fosdick, Medford; B. W. Shaw, Springfield; Edward Stone, Charlotteville; Greeley Summers, Belmont; Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Kennedy, West Mount; D. E. Campbell, Montreal; N. Hart, Toronto; G. B. Porter, Q. E. UPPER CAPE ANN

A great improvement eliminating the well known "Dead Man's Curve" at Crafts hill, Manchester, has just been completed. Here is an enterprise which shows sharply the methods of the government — national and state — as employed in their alphabetical labor relief projects. Under the former some $60,000 was expended over nearly two years during which time travel was seriously impeded. Then the money "give out" and the thing was left almost literally in the air, worse than before. The town of Manchester taking the bull by the horns let out the work for completion to a contractor for $13,000 and the job was completed in less than a month. Examples such as this, and there are many, have done much to bring relief work and those engaged in it into disrepute, even of those working men, and there are many, who believe in giving a fair day's work for a fair day's pay.

MANCHESTER

Next Friday the 13th a novel event is planned at the Essex County Club which is to be a costume party for the benefit of the North Shore Council of Boy Scouts. It will be known as a "Favorite Sports Dance" the participants to compete for costumes representing their favorite sport and the prize awards will be something useful in the sporting line. The proceeds will go toward improvements at Camp Waskeche, the Boy Scout camp in

New Hampshire. The arrangements are in the hands of an energetic committee made up of Mrs. Chatfield Whitman, Mrs. F. Wadsworth Busk, Mrs. Lawrence Coolidge, Mrs. John W. Goodrich, Mrs. Frederic Winthrop, Mr. William Fawcette, Mr. Richard S. Humphrey, Mr. Lawrence H. H. Johnson Jr. and Mr. James Reynolds.

Miss Helen Howe, daughter of Mr. A. Mark deWolfe Howe, who is spending his first season at Manchester Cove, left this week for Maine where she will give a series of characterizations for which she is famous, the first being at the University of Maine at Orono, the following day appearing at the Lakewood theatre in Skowhegan for a matinee performance and next Monday will be in Bar Harbor for a private presentation at the summer home of Mrs. Charlton Yarnell of Devin, Penn.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell S. Codman have had as guests this week Mr. and Mrs. Gordon K. Bell of Katonah, N. Y., sister and brother-in-law of Mrs. Codman. They will also visit with Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sullivan at Pride's Crossing and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scott at Singing Beach before their return home.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Spencer recently gave a dinner for Mrs. Fiske Warren and her mother Mrs. Hamilton Osgood who are guests at Magnolia for a few weeks.

An announcement that will be of interest to many of the summer residents of Manchester is that made by Mr. Leonard Craske who is giving one of his notable colour lectures at Hawthorne Inn Casino, East Gloucester, at 8:45. His subject will be "The Island of Haiti" and will be beautifully illustrated by 120 slides taken by the direct colour process. The lecture is given under the auspices of the Gloucester Society of Artists.

The highlight among the society events of the week was the Grew-Cochrane nuptials, the wedding taking place at St. John's Church at Beverly Farms at high noon on Tuesday. The bride was Miss Eugenie H. Grew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph C. Grew whose summer home is "Laurel Ledge," West Manchester, and the groom was Mr. Alexander Cochrane, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Douglas Cochrane of Boston and North East Harbor, Me.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Bradford H. Burnham, rector of St. John's, in the presence of a large number of guests, the affair being among the most brilliant of all the season's nuptials on the North Shore. The bride wore a gown of cream white satin made Victorian style, with very full skirt and trimmed with rare old lace which was a family heirloom. Her long bridal veil was of white tulle and held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a large bouquet of white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridegroom's sister, Miss Ramelle Cochrane was the maid of honor and her two bridesmaids were Miss Ann Pemberton of Brookline and Miss Esther Binney of Boston.

Richard Stackpole of Boston was best man and the ushers were Charles Theodore Russell Jr., Standish Van Voorhis of Boston, and Samuel G. Atkinson and John M. Bleakie of Brookline.

Following the ceremony a reception and breakfast was held at the Essex County Club which was largely attended. After a brief wedding trip they will return to Manchester to spend the balance of the summer with the bride's parents and in the fall will sail for Europe for a holiday abroad, returning to spend the winter in Boston.

Miss Grew attended the Beaver Country Day School and the Fox Hollow school in Rhinebeck, N. Y. Mr. Cochrane attended Groton school and the University of Vermont. He is a member of the Racquet and Exchange clubs.

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Emmy Lou:

Laura and I have not had a dull moment since we arrived in Gloucester. Taking care of our "Estate," working and "seeing the sights" has kept us busy — and of course "Tucky" has sort of helped to fill all spare moments.

Saturday evening we went over town, did some hasty shopping and dashed home to get a good night's rest — for Sunday we had planned a very eventful day.

I went to the Cape Ann National Bank and Laura to the Gloucester National Bank where we withdrew a small amount of money for the "regal holiday." It seems, Emmy Lou, that all we do is put money in our accounts and turn around and take it out — you know how women are — but the tellers are wonderful about it and do not seem to mind at all.

In the Gloucester Gas and Electric Company we paid our bill and looked around — there were so many nice things we would like to have had but we simply could not afford it this week.

L. E. Andrews has such a large supply of almost everything imaginable in the hardware line that you want to buy much more than you anticipated. We intended to buy just a small set of dishes for dressed up occasions. Blue and white china with splashes of red and gold make up the nicest set of dishes and so very reasonably priced even a miser like you could not resist. The clerk very obligingly packed them and carried them to the car for us. As we glanced around just before leaving, we spied some truly grand aluminum ware. Pots and pans in all sizes and shapes — we purchased several knowing full well we could trust to their dependability because of the honesty and good judgment of L. E. Andrews.

Now for the big news of the week — our Sunday celebration. Believe it or not, Emmy Lou, we arose at 6 a.m., packed "Tucky" and all the equipment we thought would be necessary for the day, in the car and started off.

At 6.30 a.m. we arrived at Mellow's Wharf and boarded one of their fishing vessels — thus began our first experience as fishermen.

Gloucester has long been famous as a fishing village but it has outgrown the "village" part, is entirely sophisticated, and has accommodated itself to the demands of a high class summer clientele.

Fishing is still the big thing, all sorts of vessels are constantly unloading cargoes from nearly all parts of the Atlantic and the packing plants are a matter of considerable interest to the visitors. This is especially so to me, being a guide at Gorton's. All their products are excellent. The range of fishing by Gloucester's fishermen extends from the Capes of Virginia to Greenland and Iceland, and trips last all the way from a few days to three and four months at a time. The fishing vessels go to different banks in accordance with the particular kind of fish that are sought. Many of them fish in the Channel and on George's Banks, both famous grounds. The latter is the most noted in the world. Millions upon millions of pounds of fish have been brought to Gloucester and other fishing ports of Massachusetts from these famous fishing banks. The quality of the fish caught is of the best — and that's what Gorton's provides.

But Gloucester has grown into a city with beautiful residential streets and fine parks, great stores cater to the most fastidious, amusement places offer pleasures of all sorts to the young and old, the art colonies, with their galleries filled with paintings have a decided urge for the lover of beauty.

Before our sight seeing excursion, scheduled for the afternoon, we stopped to lunch at Stage Coach Inn. On the highroad from Gloucester to Essex stands what was known as the old Freeman house, one of the most ancient landmarks in these parts. It is one of the oldest inns in New England. Whether it was built by Sylvester Everleth or Everleigh, the original settler, or his son, is not certain. Everleigh had considerable tracts of land at West Parish in 1648, and was granted a license to maintain a public house and it is believed that this house was used as a tavern at that early date. However, now it is a most charming place that is standing practically the same as it was in the long ago.

The food was excellent and "Tucky" behaved like a little gentleman. Outside of the Inn there stands an old stage coach, quite rusted from age, but very characteristic of its time. We explained in very minute detail to the youngster the significance of this antique which immediately started a barrage of "whys?" It took a great deal of coaxing to get the little fellow back to the car because he insisted we could buy a horse to attach to the stage coach so he might have a ride.

the consumer paying $30 per barrel at five cents per fish — the barrel paid for by the fishermen in the first instance costing 87½ cents.

After these two tinker years in 1885 the catch dropped almost entirely. At that time most of the enterprising mackerel masters had become the owners of their own vessels. But they held on in the hope that the mackerel would return next year — which they did not for twenty-five years after when they reappeared having had time to reproduce and multiply. But in that interval practically all of those owner-masters lost their all and went broke never to recover and as the years took their toll of youthful energy drifting off into other occupations, watchmen ashore or something of the like.

Shortly after 1910 mackerel began to reappear in moderate volume. By that time came a revolution in the business. The oil-combustion engine first introduced by the king mackerel master of them all, the redoubtable Capt. Sol Jacobs gradually began to displace sail and by 1920 had displaced canvas altogether.

With these high powered Diesels the catch was disposed of fresh, preserved in ice at the various ports along the coast. It may be stated here that mackerel first appear in the Spring, about 40 miles north of Hatteras proceeding northward, following the coastline until about June they have reached the waters off southern Massachusetts and after the spawning season stay on the New England coast as far north and east as the Isle of Shoals. The catch is now marketed at the nearest port during this time, in the early Spring at Wildwood, N. J., at Fulton market New York, at New Bedford and at Boston as the season progresses and the fish work northward during the summer season, the Cut in the Cape Cod canal furnishing a short cut to the latter market. A slight proportion now is brought here, where previously the entire catch, when salted was brought home, re-packed and sold throughout the country. For instance of the 37,000,000 pounds caught by local vessels last year less than four million pounds were landed here and this has been the case since about 1925 when mackerel reappeared on the coast in enormous volume.

Recently the mackerel, so abundant on these shores for the past ten years, have gone AWOL. Up to date the catch has hardly reached 8,000,000 pounds against about 25,000,000 pounds for the corresponding period of the past decade. Is this mackerel history repeating itself as in the period from 1885 to 1910 in which the catch was negligible? Meanwhile the mackerel fishermen are turning their attention to taking redfish, pollock, swordfish and other varieties. The fishermen's eggs are not altogether in one basket.

have been sacrificed at sea, a record that perhaps no other port similarly circumstanced may parallel on this continent. And it is believed that no similar services are held elsewhere in this country at least.

In late years owing to improvements and different methods of fishing the total annual loss in the fisheries has dwindled to an almost negligible proportion in contrast with that of years back.

A procession will be formed at three in the afternoon at American Legion building under the marshalship of Charles A. Ingalls, president of the Fisherman's Institute under whose auspices these services are held, the Legion band furnishing music.

A stop will be made at the Fisherman's monument on the Stacy Esplanade where Capt. R. Elroy Prior, president of the Master Mariners Association and Capt. Edward A. Proctor, representing the Fishing Master Producers will deposit wreaths at the base of the statue. The procession will reform and proceed to the Cut bridge where the main exercises will be held, the officiating clergymen being Rev. Robert N. Rodenmayer, rector of St. John's Episcopal church and Rev. Dwight L. Cart, pastor of Trinity Congregational church. A poem written by Miss Mary Brooks "Scatter Water on the Waves" will be sung by a group of school children while festoons of flowers are thrown upon the waters of the bay. Prof. Gardner L. Foley will deliver the main address. The observance is under direction of Rev. George E. Russell, chaplain of the Institute who will read the roll of the year's dead. Mr. Russell will be pleased to receive flowers for this service.

From here we proceeded to Magnolia, stopping at Norman's Woe. A scene of romance and tragedy, real and filmed, is Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Here we marveled at this great fissure and then looked outward to the sea for a glimpse of East Gloucester, Eastern Point Light and the great Government breakwater, while close at hand, as we climbed to a high spot on the rocks, we were thrilled at our first glimpse of Norman's Woe. As we looked at this setting of Longfellow's famous poem, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," and listened to the deep toned warning of its bell, we recalled the famous lines:

"Such is the wreck of the Hesperus
In the midnight and the snow
God save us all from a death like this
On the reef of Norman's Woe."

Reluctantly we left this spot behind, but ahead of us was one more thing to complete our sojourn — Gloucester Society of Artists Gallery. It has been said that five thousand artists visit Cape Ann every year and that fully five hundred exhibit their paintings and works of sculpture here.

Arriving back at the camp about 6 p.m. we were certainly famished and proceeded to raid the Coolerator. We found various foods for sandwiches and when I made some lemonade there were no ice cubes. Of course our coolerator ice cubes are quickly and easily made. We just filled the cuber with warm water, then placed it on the ice — Presto: in 3 to 5 minutes the cubes were ready. Ordinarily we do not use water in the cuber, but simply move it to a new position on the ice as cubes are needed.

Another feature about ice from the Coolerator is that it is crystal-clear and without any queer tastes or odors.

Coolerator ice cubes are easy to make and always a pleasure to serve.

Laura, for one day could not refrain from doing a little business she claimed was very important. She was checking over some figures of investments for Hornblower and Weeks together with her transactions with the Gloucester Co-operative Bank. Really, Emmy Lou, I was too exhausted to be of any assistance to Laura, so I gathered "Tucky" and all his souvenirs and took him home.

Pardon the abrupt ending but I attempted this letter during my lunch hour which is about to end, so I'll say adieu for now.

As ever,

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise di-

One of the steps in the preparation of codfish for the market. Drying and curing whole codfish at the Gorton-Pew Fisheries.

You Are Cordially Invited—

OUR door is always open. And we are always glad to show visitors the fascinating processes employed in our plant. See how we take fish fresh from the ocean and prepare them for the tables of America's discriminating housewives. There is no more interesting sight in all of quaint old Gloucester.

If it were only possible to transport some of the charm of Gloucester back home—its romantic harbor, its curious old streets and homes, its atmosphere of the sea. Although this is impossible you may have a reminder of pleasant Gloucester days in sending to your home some of our delicious fish products. For this purpose
